ANNUAL REPORT 2007
When you are struggling to make human rights matter in U.S. foreign policy, it’s no surprise that often you are pushing a boulder up a hill. Or carrying water in a sieve. Yet sometimes, miraculously, we feel we are making a difference. Lately, after many years of limited gains, we’ve felt we are having a real impact in U.S. policy towards Colombia. It’s still hugely problematic – don’t get me wrong – but our work is changing U.S. diplomacy and aid. Other issues face enormous obstacles, but how good it is to see some signs of hope.

As I thought about this, two lessons came to mind.

1. The value of persistence. Our message of human rights and social justice is the right message. We need to keep saying it. If it takes many years before anyone listens, keep on. Eventually our words will be heard.

2. The value of collaboration. Where we do break through, we do it together. When you are up against a tremendous array of monied interests, established viewpoints and entrenched bureaucracies, only a collective effort has a chance.

Win or lose, we just have to keep trying – together.
Who We Are

The Latin America Working Group serves a coalition of nongovernmental, religious, grassroots and humanitarian agencies. We bring coalition partners together to create advocacy and public education campaigns to encourage U.S. policy towards Latin America and the Caribbean that favors human rights, justice, peace and sustainable development.

The Latin America Working Group (LAWG), a 501(c) 4 nonprofit, carries out advocacy and grassroots education. The Latin America Working Group Education Fund (LAWGEF), a 501(c) 3 nonprofit, sponsors educational events and produces publications. In the list of this year’s activities, lobbying activities were carried out by the LAWG, and educational activities by the LAWGEF.

2007 ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Colombia: Making Human Rights Matter

- Took part in an international mission to investigate killings of civilians by the Colombian army. With US Office on Colombia and the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA), we then organized visits by Colombian human rights experts to the State Department and the major House and Senate committees. This resulted in $55 million in military aid to Colombia remaining frozen over human rights concerns.

- Led a coalition effort to propose and advocate for changes in the Colombia aid package. This resulted in major changes to the aid package in both the House and the Senate, which increased aid to rural communities, including Afro-Colombian and indigenous areas; increased support to victims and for investigating and prosecuting human rights abuses; and cut and placed stronger conditions on military aid and the aerial spraying program.

- Organized with Catholic Relief Services and WOLA a delegation of Colombian church and nongovernmental leaders and the governor of Nariño province to raise attention to the crisis of Colombia’s internally displaced people. We also organized support for a resolution regarding Colombia’s displaced which was approved by the full House of Representatives.
Cuba: The Right to Travel

- Published, with WOLA, a coffee-table-quality photo book advocating an end to the ban on travel to Cuba: Love, Loss, and Longing. Based on the traveling exhibit, this book is available on amazon.com and through on-line and on-site bookstores, in addition to the LAWG website.

- Coordinated, with WOLA, Capitol Hill education days for prominent Cuban Americans to educate and advocate for the freedom to travel to Cuba.

- Presented on a panel about educational exchange with Cuba at the Latin American Studies Association (LASA) meeting in Montreal, Canada.
was held in Canada as a response to the denial of U.S. visas to academics from Cuba to come to the United States to participate in the congress.

Violence Against Women

- Organized support for the Resolution to Condemn Violence Against Women in Guatemala, which was passed by full House of Representatives. Organized support for Senate resolution, which is still pending.

- Helped gather signators for a congressional dear colleague letter from Representative Hilda Solis to Mexican President Calderón encouraging him to make resolving these murders and prevention of violence against women a priority for his administration.

- Coordinated activities, with WOLA, for a delegation of Mexican activists and the mother of a murder victim to update Congress and the public on the lack of progress made by Mexican and Chihuahuan authorities and encourage further action on this issue.
Humane Borders

- Collaborated with immigrants’ rights and our partners, the Border Network for Human Rights and the Border Action Network, to host a delegation of 300+ grassroots activists from border and interior communities. During visits to Congress, delegation participants highlighted the need for comprehensive immigration reform and policies and practices that protect the human rights of border community residents and migrants alike.

- Arranged with our border partners public events for two delegations of academics, faith leaders, law enforcement and elected officials from U.S. border communities. In congressional briefings and press events, delegation members outlined recommendations for stronger oversight and accountability mechanisms to ensure that the civil and human rights of border communities and migrants are not harmed in the rush to ensure national security.

- Conducted on-the-ground research and met with Mexican NGOs to examine the human rights implications of Mexico’s efforts to reproduce U.S.-style border... security and immigration enforcement efforts along its border with Guatemala and Belize.

Below the Radar: Monitoring Military Aid

- Published Below the Radar, a report analyzing the last decade of U.S. military aid trends to the Latin American region, with the Center for International Policy and WOLA. The report was widely reported on in Latin American, U.S. and international media. Presented the report at the University of Chicago and DePaul University and it was featured in a Chicago Public Radio show.

- Participated in a dialogue with the U.S. military’s Southern Command, emphasizing our concerns with U.S. support for expansive roles for the Latin American militaries and ongoing human rights abuses by the Colombian military.

- Debunked the Bush Administration’s claim that it had doubled aid to Latin America, through distribution of our analysis during President Bush’s tour of the region.
resulting in substantial press coverage, including in the Washington Post and other major media outlets.

Guatemala

Supported coalition efforts in favor of the Commission to Investigate Clandestine Groups (CICIG), which finally was established in 2007. Many hopes are pinned on CICIG to make progress in investigating the shadowy networks linked to corruption, drug trafficking and human rights abuses.
