Latin America Working Group
Action at Home for Just Policies Abroad
2012 Annual Report
I have always been proud of the way the Latin America Working Group opens doors for Latin American human rights activists to talk to U.S. policymakers and the public. But it’s usually for two, three, four activists at a time. In September 2012, we opened doors for 110 Mexican victims of violence and human rights activists.

The Caravan for Peace with Justice and Dignity traveled thousands of miles across the United States, ending in three days in Washington, D.C., jam-packed with events, press, and policymaker meetings we and our partners worked tirelessly to organize.

The brave caravaneros spoke out against the human toll of policies that fail to stop drug violence in Mexico, and indeed add to the bloodshed. They spoke about our failure to stop the flow of assault weapons across the U.S. border, the deportation of migrants back into the hands of drug gangs, and the impact of bringing the Mexican military into the streets. They said: We are not collateral damage of the drug war. Our loved ones have names; they have mothers and fathers, husbands and wives, brothers and sisters. The United States has a responsibility in the violence that is causing us such pain. You have to rethink the ways your actions or failure to act are contributing to the sorrow we feel.

We were honored to stand with Melchor, whose son, a street artist, was disappeared; with Daniel, who has lost five relatives to violence and whose entire family is in exile; and with Lucia and Alfonso, parents seeking justice after their son, a systems engineer, was disappeared on a highway outside Monterrey.

We were proud to get on board the Caravan—and to work with you, people from across the nation, who are taking a stand for peace with justice and dignity.

The Latin America Working Group serves a coalition of nongovernmental, religious, grassroots and humanitarian agencies. We bring coalition partners together to create advocacy and public education campaigns to encourage U.S. policy towards Latin America and the Caribbean that favors human rights, justice, peace and sustainable development.

The Latin America Working Group (LAWG), a 501(c)4 nonprofit, carries out advocacy and grassroots education. The Latin America Working Group Education Fund (LAWGEF), a 501(c)3 nonprofit, sponsors educational events and produces publications. In the list of this year’s activities, lobbying activities were carried out by the LAWG, and educational activities by the LAWGEF.

2012 ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Promoting Justice for Mexico & the Borderlands

- Served as lead coordinators for the Washington, D.C. stop of the historic U.S.-Mexico Caravan for Peace with Justice and Dignity. Worked with partners to organize three days full of events for the caravaneros—110 victims of violence and human rights activists—to call on the U.S. to take responsibility for failed policies and help stop the horrific violence that is afflicting their families and their country. Events included meetings with policymakers, teach-ins at local universities and a moving closing march.

- Traveled to the northern and southern borders of Mexico to meet with migrant advocates and shelter workers as part of an international verification mission on threats against migrant rights defenders and migrants in Mexico.

- Participated in an unprecedented two-day visit to short-term detention facilities to investigate conditions for migrants and engage with Customs and Border Patrol officials in Arizona, with partners including No More Deaths, Southern Border Caravaneros.
Communities Coalition, Women’s Refugee Commission, Border Action Network, and the ACLU’s Regional Center for Border Rights.

- Organized a delegation of six Mexican migrant rights defenders to present their report documenting abuses in U.S. detention and deportation processes revealed by recently deported migrants and showing how such practices put migrants in harm’s way. Co-authored a letter signed by 115 faith and nongovernmental groups calling for President Obama to reduce human rights violations in the border region by conducting a thorough investigation of allegations of excessive use of force by the Border Patrol.

- Motivated over 1,000 activists to send emails to Congress to urge them to sign letter to Secretary of State Hillary Clinton urging her to enforce human rights requirements in law and press for justice for abuses committed by security forces in Mexico.

Colombia: Standing with the Victims of Violence

- Successfully convinced State Department officials to make a priority of addressing threats and attacks against human rights defenders in diplomacy with the Colombian government. Advocated via letters and meetings with high-level State Department officials that murder, rape and torture by Colombian soldiers be tried in civilian courts, and persuaded the State Department and congressional offices to urge the same.

- Carried out a field investigation on whether land was being returned to victims of violence, and published with Lutheran World Relief Still a Dream: Land Restitution on Colombia’s Caribbean Coast.

- Acted as a juror for Colombia’s first national human rights prize in Bogotá.

- Brought families of Colombia’s disappeared to meet with policymakers and the public.

- Organized grassroots campaigns of support for land rights leaders at risk, internally displaced persons and refugees, injured GM workers, and other vulnerable sectors in Colombia.
Cuba: Travel for All

- Successfully worked with partners to increase people-to-people delegation travel to Cuba now allowed under Obama Administration revised regulations. Through our website, Cuba policy e-network, blogs and Facebook, we encouraged travel and shared resources for citizen action with returned travelers.

- Expanded new constituencies for travel and advocacy for policy change, such as providing advice and support for CAFE (Cuban Americans for Engagement), young professional Cuban Americans newly engaged in the policy debate; working to plan a charity powerboat rally to Cuba (licensing pending) for the purpose of sharing nautical expertise and experiences between the American and Cuban boating communities; and conducting an on-line survey of travelers to Cuba.

Defended people-to-people travel with action alerts and petitions when the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) and the State Department appeared to fail to comply with the administration’s policy on licensed travel; more timely issuing of people-to-people licenses has begun.

Worked with LAWG coalition partners to make possible the visits of Cuban civil society members to share their experiences in a changing Cuban society with policymakers and the public.

Defending Human Rights in Central America

- Participated in an International Verification Mission on the violence against campesino activists in Bajo Aguán, Honduras with press conferences in Tocoa and Tegucigalpa; helped to organize a congressional letter with 94 signatures on stopping the violence.

- Brought Father Ismael Moreno of Radio Progreso to speak before the Tom Lantos Human Rights Commission in Congress about obstacles to freedom of expression in Honduras.
Presented reports to Congress with Guatemala Human Rights Commission and other partners on why the Guatemala military aid ban should be maintained.

Monitoring Military Aid
